Excerpt: . . . it had awakened, and the refined taste and power in composition of their royal author. It is not very often that the same individual wins the affection of successive monarchs--an heir-apparent and a ruling sovereign, but such was undoubtedly the case with Lord Stewart. Numerous letters are extant in the Londonderry Collection from William IV. , both when Duke of Clarence and when on the throne, which breathe mony to the gallantry of the British cavalry, in which you have borne so distinguished a part. -- Sm H. BloomrnsLn to Sm C. SrEwART, Jan. 9, 1809. --MS. Londonderry Papers. In relation to Lord Stewarts conduct in the Congress of Vienna and the arduous duties arising out of it, which extended through the whole of 1816, his Royal Highness the Prince Regent expressed himself in the most gratifying and affectionate terms, in the following holograph letter, the original of which is in the Londonderry Papers: --MYnnAR CHARLES, --AflZel the recent events that have taken place atVienna, I cannot resist taking up my pen, and sending you a few lines in my own handwriting. The sincerity and warmth of the affection I have uniformly felt for you now for so many years, I thought had been such as to admit of little possibility of either addition or increase. But I find myself completely mistaken and deceived; for your conduct on the late occasion, in whatever point of view I consider it, and that it offers itself to...
